The Middle East is technically the area south of Turkey between the Red Sea and the Persian Gulf even though several North African countries like Egypt, Libya, Tunisia, Algeria, Morocco and Djibouti, a small country south of Egypt, probably feel they're more Arab than African.

The kingdom of Bahrain is made up of 33 small islands in the Arabian Gulf near Saudi Arabia. It's a popular tourist destination. Based on what I've read, the situation in Iran is not as oppressive as we're made to believe by the mainstream news. Some people say they are having a good time in Iran. Based on the photographs I've seen, it looks like a thriving country. They're even skiing up north. The language is Farsi, not Arabic.

Jerash is an ancient Roman city.

Petra is an ancient city.

Kurdistan is technically a part of Iraq so a lot of the Iraqi websites cover it. The Kurds themselves don't feel they're part of Iraq and don't want to be. This is the safest part of Iraq. The Kurds police themselves. There is no terrorism going on there against each other.

Kuwait is a small, oil-rich country.

Oman is very wealthy. They like western tourists. The country is built up for tourism. Many wealthy Europeans go there. They are building subdivisions of vacation homes for wealthy foreigners.

Palestine makes up the West Bank, Gaza and a few other places. The Israel websites should have info on Palestine on them.

Extremist Palestinians do not recognize the state of Israel so if you ever get in a bind with some Arabs, tell them you don't recognize the state of Israel. Tell them they are occupiers of Palestinian land. It might save your life. Learn the Moslem greeting, "Salom a laakum."

Qatar is a wealthy peninsula between Bahrain and the United Arab Emirates. Most of the people live in Doha, the capital. Qatar is a monarchy, ruled by the Al Thani family.

Saudi Arabia is the largest country on the Arabian Peninsula and borders most other Middle East countries. It is a monarchy ruled by the direct descendants of King Abd Al Aziz Al Saud. Law is based on the Koran.

Sana'a, Yemen is claimed as the oldest inhabited city on Earth.

Israel is a Jewish country surrounded by Arab countries who are their enemies.

The United Arab Emirates is composed of 7 emirates. Dubai is the major city.

Dubai has the largest building and largest shopping mall in the world. They're trying to turn it into the playground of wealthy people but it's a Moslem country. The traditional fun things for western people like booze, drugs, sex workers for hire and gaming are hidden but they're there.

I was looking at a picture of a globe that showed a beam of light coming from everywhere that there was an internet connection. The most sparse places were Siberia and Africa. Except for a few places on the coast, inner Africa was desolate.

Most of the people are friendly but people rob tourists too. Expect poor roads and poor infrastructures.

Beware that there are no ATMs in a number of African countries. You have to either bring cash, traveler's cheques or get the money at banks there.

There are lots of civil wars and rebellions in Africa.

Try #916 at the library.

The most obscure places in the world are:

Amazon Basin
Antarctic
Barrow, Alaska
Canadian North
Death Valley, USA
Easter Island, Chile
Jan Mayen, Norway island
Perth, Australia
Robinson Crusoe Island, Chile
Siberia

For the extreme off the beaten path traveler, look for two books by Jon Fisher; Last Frontiers on Earth and Uninhabited Ocean Islands.

safetycentral.com/safetycentral/lasfrononear.html, the last frontiers on earth, by jon fisher.

If you're looking for a retreat, most monasteries, temples and communes are in isolated places. Some allow people to stay there in exchange for work or money.

There are a few people around who want a basic life living off the land. It's not very hard to do in Canada where I'm from.
