André Warner is a professional killer. Thirty-nine contracts have made him a wealthy man, and his fortieth is to be his last. The hit goes smoothly enough, and the victim - son and heir of a vicious drug baron - is eliminated with minimal fuss. Along the way, the man's mistress gets caught up in the crossfire. Regrettable collateral damage. Warner drives off into the sunset to hang up his gun and retire to a Mediterranean idyll. Then into his life comes Gina, a stunningly beautiful divorcee with a bad experience of men. Despite her initial resistance, she and Warner eventually fall in love, upsetting his plans for a footloose existence. Simultaneously, his past catches up with him, putting Gina at risk. Vengeance is in the air. His retirement plans in shreds, his new love in jeopardy, Warner strives to regain control of his destiny in the only way he knows.
