Love Song is an African-American adult romance. The story is filled with love, heartbreak and passion. People who love stories that make them laugh, cry, and feel the heat of passion will fall in love with Daniella Christopher and Jason Adams. She was a woman who spent years courageously searching for two things, personal strength and unconditional love. He was a man in search of Daniella Christopher.

Daniella was taken for granted by the men in her life. She was proof that beauty and love don't walk hand in hand. Although she had the ability to walk away from her turbulent relationships, she didn't have the resilience to bounce back from a broken heart and mend after her world had been torn apart.

Although she never begrudged them their happiness, she was envious of her sisters and her friend for their success in the arena of love. Barbara Townsend, Daniella's older sister, never needed anyone to affirm her position as an independent, thinking woman. Although she was a certified registered nurse, she treasured staying home and caring for her family. After ten years of marriage, her husband still loved her as much as he had the day he first saw her. Daniella's younger sister cherished freedom and independence. Leniece Christopher never allowed a man to declare any dominance or superiority over her mentally, physically or emotionally. After being betrayed by her fiancé, she swore to never depend on a man again. She didn't trust them and didn't feel there was one that deserved her heart. Rory Mason was Daniela's best friend. Rory possessed so much sophistication and personality that her presence could be felt in a room full of people. When she gave her heart to her man, she had enough confidence to know it was forever. These women possessed
